The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 6-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Cavanaugh in view of Rao ('919). Cavanaugh teaches a pump piston used to feed a common rail fuel system and having circumferential lubrication grooves in the piston.

Rao teaches that it was known to use lubrication grooves in a piston as small as 5 microns in order to hold lubricant for lubricating the piston within its chamber.

Applicant's limitation of a micron range has not been rejected as vague (under 35 USC 112, second paragraph) but merely broad and thus the disclosure of 5 microns in Rao teaches his range and would have made obvious the claimed depth for the channels of Cavanaugh.

Claims 12 and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Rao and Cavanaugh as applied to claims 6-7 above, and further in view of Guernert (DE ('044).

Guernert teaches (Figure 2) the channels of these claims and, because they are used in a fuel pump, they would have been obvious to use in Cavanaugh.

Claims 10-11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
